ABOUT US

Burton Lumber Corporation was founded by George H. Burton in 1945 shortly after World War II. Burton Lumber has undergone many changes through the years. In the early years, Burton Lumber was a lumber mill and treating facility servicing eastern Virginia.

Since 1931, the history of Burton Lumber Corporation has been closely tied to the growth of the Mid-Atlantic region. Originally founded by George H. Burton Sr., prior to World War II, the direction of the company was later taken over by his son George H. Burton Jr. the man who guided Burton Lumber for over six decades. In the early days of the company, the Chesapeake plant was actually a sawmill and millwork shop, manufacturing its own sawed lumber from local sources, then kiln-drying and machining the finished product.

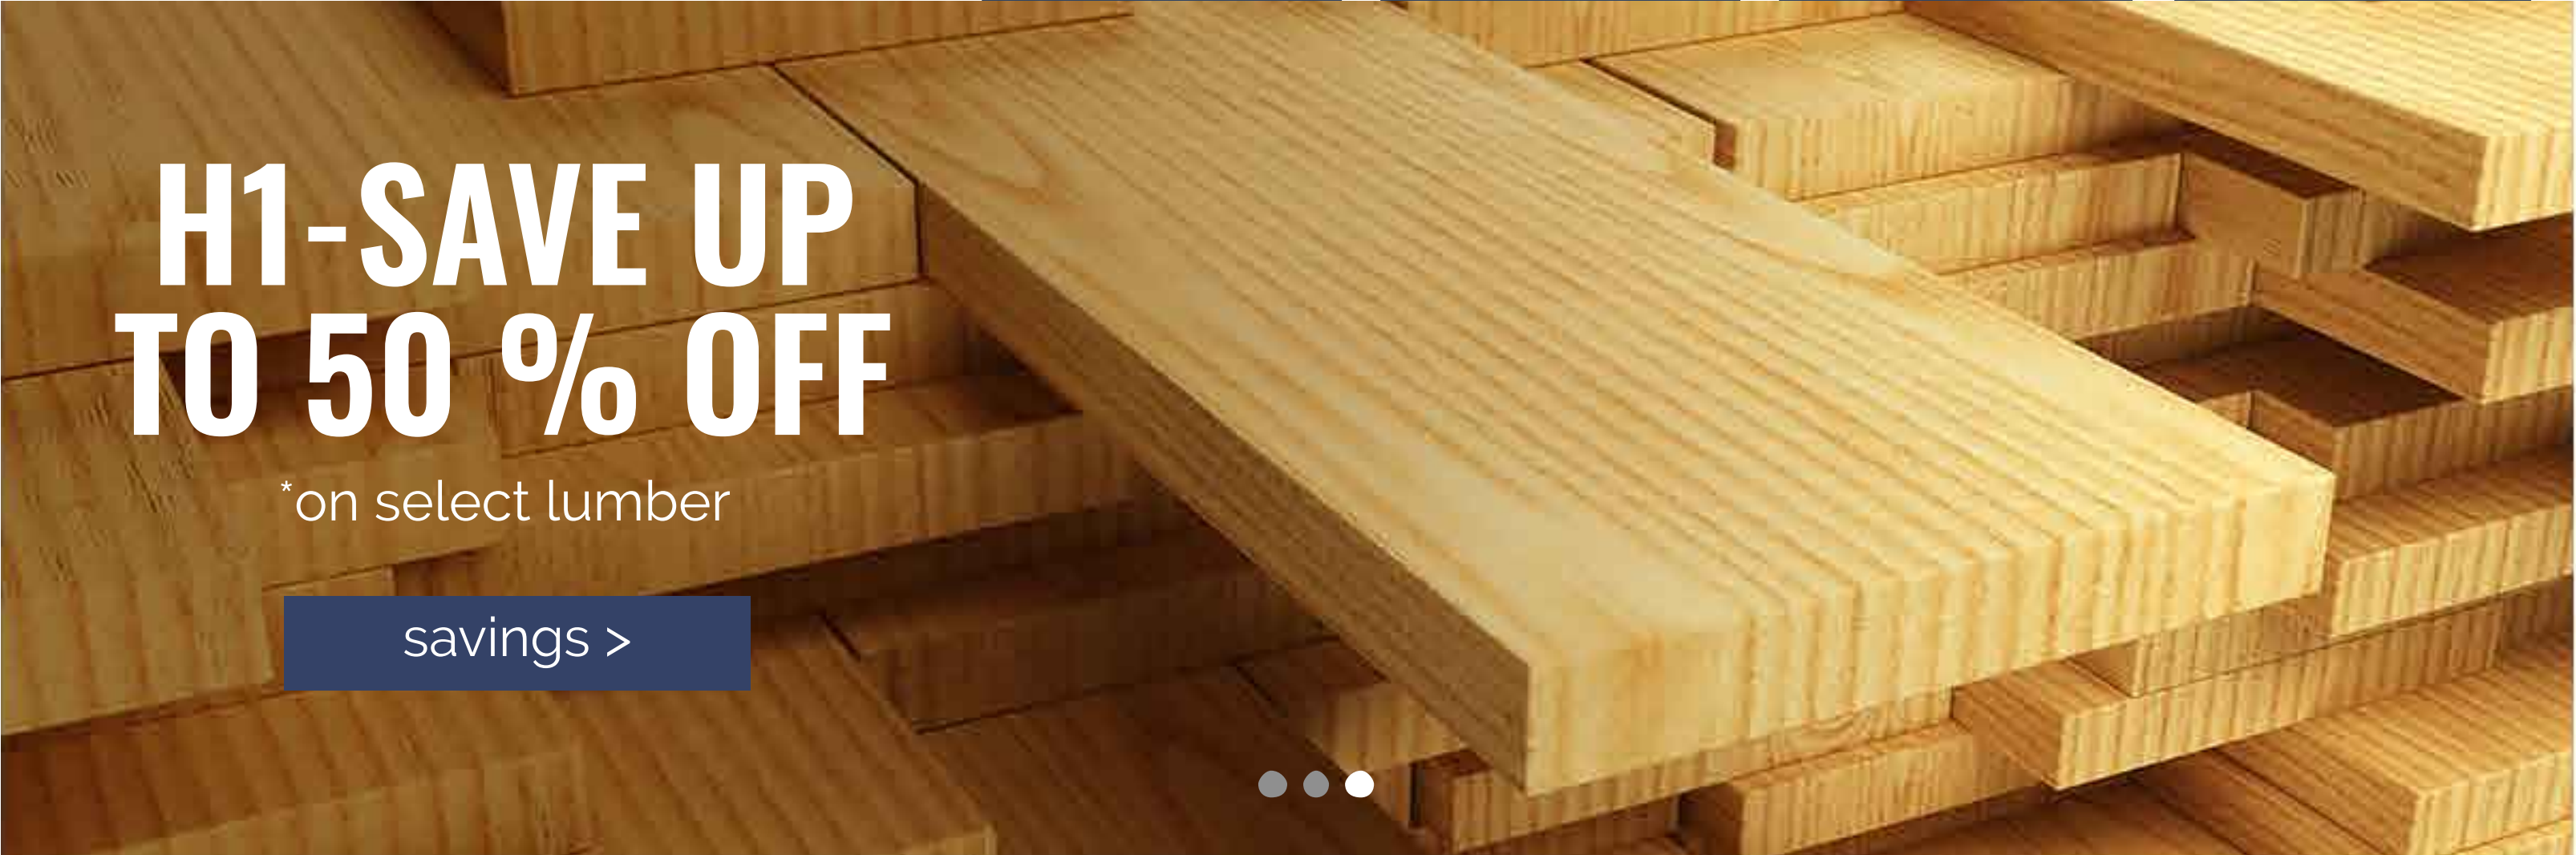

Then in 1974 a catastrophic fire took place in the Chesapeake plant - a fire that demolished much of the machinery and forced Burton to consider closing the entire operation.

Now, over 60 years later, Burton Lumber has expanded to three locations in two states. Our product offerings and service have changed dramatically over the years, as well. Burton Lumber is now a complete building material supplier. From windows and doors to engineered lumber, Burton Lumber can supply all the needs of contractors, homeowners and local and federal government agencies.
